A GUIDE TO THEIR CORRECT USE

INTRODUCTION

THERE are right and wrong ways of using titles and other marks of honour or distinction; or rather, there are as a rule one right and several wrong ways. The right way has generally come about by use extending over a long period among the title-holding classes themselves or those allied to them. Even to these it presents some difficulties, so that some such assistance to their right use as will be found in the following pages should be of service.

It seems desirable to add that the suggestions for letter endings given in the book are not necessarily to be followed rigidly. They may be varied with the writer's own idea of the appropriate.

A note of thanks is due from the editor to those kind correspondents who have suggested additions and improvements, many of them incorporated in this, the sixth, edition.

TITLES AND FORMS OF ADDRESS

ROYALTY

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

ALTHOUGH it falls to the lot of comparatively few to be privileged to converse with our King and Queen or members of their family, yet the circle tends to widen in our democratic age, and therefore it may be useful to an increasing number of people—and interesting to all—to know the correct manner of speech with their sovereigns.

On presentation to the King or Queen the subject does not start the conversation. He or she will answer, using in the first instance the title Your Majesty, and subsequently Sir or Mam. In the case of the Prince of Wales and other royal princes the same rules apply, the title used in the first instance being Your Royal Highness, and subsequently Sir. Royal princesses, whether married or unmarried, are called in the first instance Your Royal Highness, and subsequently Mam.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

THE KING

Sir, or

May it please Your Majesty,

I have the honour to remain, Sir,
Your Majesty's most humble and obedient subject,

Address of envelope (for formal or State documents only)—

To His (or Her) Royal Highness the Duke (or Duchess) of —

THE PEERAGE

THE peerage has five descending grades. They are DUKES, MARQUESSSES, EARLS, VISCOUNTS, and BARONS, and in each grade there are five classes. We will take them all in turn, creating a new title in each grade for our examples. General points will be taken first, and references will be made wherever possible to a point which has already been discussed.

DOWAGER PEERESSES

The following rules apply to the five grades of the peerage and also to the baronetage.

A dowager peeress is the mother, stepmother, or grandmother of the reigning peer, and the widow of a preceding one. In no other case is she a dowager.

Example —The Dowager Duchess of Middlesex.

In cases of other relationship her Christian name is used to distinguish her from the wife of the existing peer, and indeed, this form is becoming more and more usual for all widowed peeresses.

Example —Mary, Duchess of Middlesex.

But if the existing peer has no wife, the widow of his predecessor is addressed as if her husband were still alive without prefix or Christian name.

PEERESSES RE-MARRYING

A peeress who re-marries loses her previous title unless it is hers in her own right. A custom exists whereby on marrying into a lower rank she may retain her previous title if she prefers to, but quite unofficially, and by courtesy only

COURTESY TITLES

All peers have a family name as well as their titles, although in numerous cases, especially in the lower ranks of the peerage, the two are the same. The family name is used by the sons and daughters of peers, excepting in the cases of eldest sons of dukes, marquesses, and earls.

In almost every case peers of these three categories have lesser titles also, of which the eldest son usually takes the highest as his courtesy title and uses it in every way as if it were his by right. In the few cases where there are no second titles, as in the earldoms of Devon, Lindsey, and Temple, the family name is used as a courtesy title. The eldest son of a duke is born in the degree of a marquess, but his courtesy title depends upon his father's lesser dignities. He takes the highest of these, which may be only that of an earl, a viscount, or a baron. He takes his title from birth, and when he marries his wife becomes a marchioness or a countess, or whatever it may be, and his children take the titles attached to those ranks. The eldest son of an eldest son takes a third title from the ducal collection, but of a lower grade than that of his father.

The correct ways of using these titles will be found under their various headings. It is in all respects the same, whether they are actual or courtesy titles.

COLLATERALS

All courtesy titles, or titles connected with the family name of a peer, are attached only to the actual descendants of that peer, with one exception, hardly to be called such. It is that when a peer is succeeded other than by a son the new peer's brothers and sisters take the titles that would have been theirs if their father had succeeded. In such cases he would have succeeded had he lived so the honour really comes through him. His widow, however, if he has left one, does not share this indulgence.

For instance, the 8th Duke of Devonshire died without issue. His heir was the eldest son of his brother, Lord Edward Cavendish, who had predeceased him. As long as the 8th duke lived his heir presumptive had no title, nor of course had his two brothers. But when Mr Victor Cavendish succeeded to the dukedom, his brothers became Lord Richard and Lord John Cavendish. His mother, however, remained Lady Edward Cavendish.

But it should be clearly understood that these privileges cannot be claimed as a right. They are given by favour of the Crown, and warrants are granted in such cases only upon the recommendation of the Home Secretary.

CONFERRED TITLES

The recipient has no right to use a newly created title until all the legalities connected with it are completed and the ceremonies performed.

LIFE PEERS

These are rare now, the only existing ones being Law Lords. They rank with hereditary barons according to the date of their creation. Their wives take the title of Lady and their children The Honourable. In all respects, except that the title does not descend, rules as for BARONS and BARONESSES apply (see p. 75).

PEERS NOT IN PARLIAMENT

Not all Scottish and Irish peers sit in the House of Lords. Irish peers, if they do not do so, may be elected to the House of Commons for any constituency but an Irish one. It does not come within our scope to explain these matters. All that concerns us is that usage in connection with their titles is precisely the same as if they were peers of Parliament.

PEERESSES IN THEIR OWN RIGHT

Some baronies and a few earldoms descend in the female line. The Dukedom of Fife, alone among the higher titles of the peerage, does so. It is now merged into the royal Dukedom of Connaught by the marriage of the elder daughter of the first Duke of Fife with Prince Arthur of Connaught. Peerages descending in the female line are thus often merged into titles of a higher degree. The late Countess of Yarborough, for instance, was Baroness Fauconberg and Conyers in her own right, and her eldest son has succeeded to her dignities. But if there should ever come a time when an Earl of Yarborough should have a daughter but no son, the Baronies of Fauconberg and Conyers would go to that daughter, while the Yarborough dignities would devolve upon the nearest male heir, and the titles would be separated again. (For modes of addressing see under the various titles. It is exactly the same as if the rank were obtained through marriage.)

HUSBANDS AND CHILDREN OF PEERESSES IN THEIR OWN RIGHT

Husbands take no style or dignity from their wives. Their children, however, are in all respects as if the peerage were held by their father.

HUSBANDS AND CHILDREN OF PEERS' DAUGHTERS

A husband's name or status is not altered in any way by his wife's degree, and the children have no distinctions of any sort through their mother

DEVOLVING TTLES

A hereditary title can descend only in the direct line, that is from father to son, or grandfather to grandson, except in the few instances, already mentioned, in which descent also includes the female line, and those in which remainder is expressly granted. An example of the latter was Lord Kitchener's earldom, which devolved upon his brother. In the case of an ancient peerage succession sometimes devolves upon a distant cousin, but he succeeds not because he is a cousin of the preceding peer, but because he is descended from some former holder of the title. The brother or nephew of a newly created peer would not succeed to his honours unless special remainder were granted in his Patent, nor would a cousin of an older creation, unless his descent were from a former holder of it. This explains why some peers succeeding take lower titles than their predecessors. The present Earl of Drogheda, for instance, gains the title through descent from the fifth earl. The sixth earl was raised to the marquessate, which was held also by the seventh and eighth earls, as his direct descendants. But with the death of the third marquess the direct male descent from the first died out, though descent from previous holders of the lower title did not. There are several similar cases in the peerage.

THE TITLE "LADY"

This is probably the commonest of all, as it is held by all peeresses under the rank of duchess, by all daughters of the three highest ranks of the peerage, and by the wives of baronets and knights. The prefix "The" marks a lady of the peerage, and must not be used before the title denoting other ranks.

THE TITLE "HONOURABLE"

The use of this title is not without its difficulties. They should be carefully noted, because the title is a fairly frequent one, including as it does the younger sons of earls, all the sons and daughters of viscounts and barons, and the wives of the sons, besides its use outside the ranks of the peerage. The important rule to note is that it is never used in speech, even by a servant. Neither is it used in letter writing, excepting on the envelope. For further information see under the various holders of the rank.

BUSINESS LETTERS

The rules, official and social, are dealt with in the following pages under each grade, but commercial cases arise which involve the plural. The use of the third person is recommended here. It has its grammatical pitfalls which must be carefully guarded against. An example may help.

Messrs J & J Brown present their compliments to His Grace The Duke of Down and in submitting their estimate await his further instructions. (Such letters are not signed.)

If however the first person style is preferred the following form may be used.

Your Lordship,

We have the honour to be
Your Lordship's obedient servants,

DUKES AND DUCHESSES

To help us in our explanation we will create a Duke of Middlesex, who is also Marquess of Huddersfield and Earl of Ramsgate, to name only his principal titles. His family name shall be Smith.

TERRITORIAL TITLES

The titles of all existing dukedoms are taken from the name of a place. There are no dukedoms of which the title is the same as the family name, as may be the case in all other grades of the peerage.

Example —The Duke of Middlesex
The Duchess of Middlesex.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

The form of address for those of social equality is Duke of Middlesex or Duchess of Middlesex, though the necessity for using the full title would generally be avoided. For instance, if there is no need to distinguish between different dukes and duchesses, plain Duke or Duchess is correct. They are referred to as The Duke or The Duchess. But in conversation it is good form to make as sparing a use as possible of titles. Inferiors address them as Your Grace, and refer to them as His Grace and Her Grace.

The archaic style of the title in conjunction with a Christian name, as Duke John, is not used now. To distinguish a particular duke from others of his line he is called John, Duke of ———, or The second Duke of ———.

DOWAGER DUCHESSSES

A dowager duchess is so called when she is the widow of the preceding peer, and the mother, stepmother, or grandmother of the reigning peer, although it is more usual in these days to distinguish her from the reigning duke's wife by using her Christian name before her title. Either of the following examples is correct therefore

Example —The Dowager Duchess of Middlesex
Mary, Duchess of Middlesex

But if the existing duke has no wife, the widow of his predecessor is addressed in all respects as if her husband were alive

Example —The Duchess of Middlesex

The rules for addressing in speech are in all ways the same as for the duke's wife, but if confusion were threatened she would be referred to as The Dowager Duchess

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner of address in writing is

My Lord Duke,

I remain, my Lord Duke,
Your Grace's most obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To His Grace The Duke of Middlesex, K G (or K.T.)

Madam,

I remain Madam,
Your Grace's most obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Her Grace The Duchess of Middlesex

(To a Dowager)

Madam,

I remain, Madam,
Your Grace's most obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Her Grace The Dowager Duchess of Middlesex, or
To Her Grace Mary, Duchess of Middlesex.

The social manner of address in writing is

Dear Duke of Middlesex,

Believe me, dear Duke,

Address of envelope—

To Her Grace The Dowager Duchess of Middlesex, or

To Her Grace Mary, Duchess of Middlesex.

ELDEST SONS OF DUKES

(See also under COURTESY TITLES, p 41)

The eldest son of a duke is born in the degree of a marquess, but his courtesy title depends upon his father's lesser dignities. He takes the highest of these, which may be only that of an earl, a viscount, or a baron. He takes his title from birth, and when he marries his wife and children share the honours attached to his rank. His eldest son takes a third title from the ducal collection, of a lower grade than that of his father.

Example—The eldest son of our Duke of Middlesex would be the Marquess of Huddersfield and his wife the Marchioness of Huddersfield. Their eldest son would be the Earl of Ramsgate.

The correct use of these titles will be found under their various headings. It is in all respects the same, whether they are actual or courtesy titles. (See pp 54 and 62)

DAUGHTERS AND YOUNGER SONS OF DUKES

The younger sons of a duke bear the title "Lord" with their Christian and family names, and all daughters of a duke bear the title "Lady."

Example—Lord John Smith
Lady Barbara Smith

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

In this category the commonest mistakes are made by those who do not know the proper use of titles. Lord John Smith must never be called Lord Smith, nor Lady Barbara Smith Lady Smith. When the full titles are not used they are called Lord John and Lady Barbara. There is no other abbreviation unless one is on such terms of intimacy as to use their Christian names alone, or, in the case of the men, their surnames alone.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner of address in writing is
My Lord,

I have the honour to remain, my Lord,
Your Lordship's obedient servant

Address of envelope—

To Lord John Smith

My Lady (or Madam),

I have the honour to remain, my Lady (or Madam),
Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Lady Barbara Smith

The social manner of address in writing is
Dear Lord John Smith,

Very faithfully yours,

or more familiarly

Dear Lord John,

Yours very truly, or

Dear Smith,

Yours sincerely,

Address of envelope—

To Lord John Smith

Dear Lady Barbara Smith,

Very faithfully yours,

or more familiarly

Dear Lady Barbara,

Very truly yours, or

Very sincerely yours,

Address of envelope—

To Lady Barbara Smith

WIVES OF YOUNGER SONS OF DUKES

The mistake already alluded to in this category is made most often of all in the case of wives of younger sons of dukes and marquesses. The wife of Lord John Smith is Lady John Smith, and never under any circumstances Lady Smith. She is known less formally as Lady John. This rule is varied only when she is of higher rank than her husband, in which case her own Christian name is substituted for his (See under MARRIED DAUGHTERS OF DUKES, p. 52.)

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

Madam (or My Lady),

I have the honour to remain, Madam (or my Lady),

Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Lady John Smith

The social manner of address in writing is

Dear Lady John Smith,

Believe me, dear Lady John Smith,

Very truly yours,

or more familiarly

Dear Lady John,

Believe me, dear Lady John,

Sincerely yours,

Address of envelope—

To Lady John Smith

WIDOWS OF YOUNGER SONS OF DUKES

If the widow of a younger son of a duke, having no title of her own, remarries with a commoner, she may continue to use her late husband's name and title if she chooses. But if she decides to take her second husband's name, she must relinquish her previous title and become plain Mrs. If, on the other hand, she has a title in her own right, she would use it coupled with her new name. If she remarries into the peerage, she would obviously share her second husband's name and title.

CHILDREN OF YOUNGER SONS OF DUKES

The children of younger sons of dukes have no distinctions of any sort. All the sons and daughters of Lord and Lady John Smith would be plain Mr or Miss. A popular fallacy would make them honourables, but that is quite wrong. They have, of course, some precedence in the social scale.

MARRIED DAUGHTERS OF DUKES

The daughter of a duke, in marrying a man of equal or higher rank than her own, shares her husband's title. In all other cases she retains her own title of Lady with her Christian name even if she marries the younger son of a duke, because by a curious anomaly all peers' daughters rank one degree higher than younger sons of the same grade. In the event of marriage with the heir of an earl or lesser peer, she is entitled, if she prefers it, to retain her own title while her husband is a courtesy lord, because she actually keeps her precedence until he succeeds to his peerage. There are instances of both usages in the peerage, and the chosen style should be ascertained in each case. Marriage with a commoner does not alter her rank in any way (nor incidentally that of her husband). Our duke's daughter, Lady Barbara Smith, married to Mr Peter Green, would become Lady Barbara Green. Under no circumstances would she be called Lady Peter Green. Together they would be referred to as Mr Peter and Lady Barbara Green, or Mr and Lady Barbara Green. Curiously enough, however, the daughter of a duke (as also of a marquess or earl) keeps her rank as such in the table of precedence if she marries out of the peerage, but exchanges it for that of her husband if she remains in it, even if it means descending several steps. Thus Lady Barbara, having married Mr Peter Green, would go in to dinner before a sister who had married a baron.

Examples — Marriage with

A commoner	Peter Green Esq	Lady Barbara Green
A knight or baronet	Sir Bernard Brown	Lady Barbara Brown
A younger son of an earl or lesser peer	The Honourable George Wilson	Lady Barbara Wilson
An eldest son of an earl	Viscount Staines	Lady Barbara Staines or Viscountess Staines (Lady Staines)
A younger son of a duke or marquess	Lord John Bull	Lady Barbara Bull
An eldest son of a marquess	The Earl of Malvern (Lord Malvern)	The Countess of Malvern (Lady Malvern)
An eldest son of a duke	The Marquess of Mere (Lord Mere)	The Marchioness of Mere (Lady Mere)

CHILDREN OF DAUGHTERS OF DUKES

The children of daughters of dukes receive no titles or distinctions of any sort through their mother.

MARQUESSES AND MARCHIONESSES

THIS title is rendered in two ways, marquess or marquis. The former is the older and purely British. Peers of this rank use which form they prefer, and their choice should be ascertained and observed in addressing them.

Our typical peer of this, the second grade, shall be the Marquess of Montgomeryshire, who is also the Earl of Malvern and Baron Swindon. His family name shall be Evans.

TERRITORIAL TITLES

The title of marquess is generally taken from the name of a place, as it invariably is in the case of a duke.

Example —The Marquess of Montgomeryshire

There are two marquessates in our peerage, however, whose titles are taken from the family names, and in both these cases the preposition is dropped, thus

The Marquess Conyngham
The Marquess Townshend

These two are the only instances in the marquessate of titles taken from family names, but in two other cases the preposition is dropped even though the titles are territorial, viz ,

The Marquess Camden.
The Marquess Douro

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

It has been said already that all peers and peeresses below ducal rank are called lord and lady in speech

This brings us to a mistake quite commonly made in connection with the lower grades of the peerage. Although it is correct to talk of The Duke, or Duchess, of Middlesex—indeed, they could not be referred to in any other way—the rule is quite different for the marquessate. The Marquess and Marchioness of Montgomeryshire would always be referred and spoken to as Lord and Lady Montgomeryshire. There are a few formal occasions on which the full title would be used, but it would never occur in intimate speech. This shibboleth is so often transgressed by novelists and others who love the peerage better than they know its ways that it may seem a little hard to believe how wrong it appears to be among the people who know.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is—

My Lord Marquess, or
My Lord,

I have the honour to be, my Lord Marquess (or my Lord),
Your obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To The Most Honble The Marquess of Montgomeryshire
Madam,

I have the honour to remain, Madam,
Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

The social manner of addressing in writing is Dear Lord Montgomeryshire, or
Dear Montgomeryshire,

Yours sincerely,

To The Marquess of Montgomeryshire.

Dear Lady Montgomeryshire

Believe me, dear Lady Montgomeryshire,

Very sincerely yours,

To The Marchioness of Montgomeryshire

DOWAGER MARCHIONESSES

A dowager marchioness is so called when she is the widow of the preceding marquess, although it is more usual in these days to distinguish her from the reigning marquess's wife by using her Christian name before her title. Either of the following examples is correct therefore

Example—The Dowager Marchioness of Montgomeryshire
Enid, Marchioness of Montgomeryshire

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

ELDEST SONS OF MARQUESSES

(See also under COURTESY TITLES, p 41)

As stated elsewhere, peers in this category have lesser titles as well, and the eldest son takes usually the highest of these as his courtesy title, which is used in every way as if it were his by right. He takes the title from birth, and on his marriage his wife and children share the honours attached to his rank. His eldest son would take a third title from the marquess's collection.

Example—The eldest son of our Marquess of Montgomeryshire would be the Earl of Malvern and his wife the Countess of Malvern. Their eldest son would be Baron Swindon. The correct use of these titles will be found under their various headings. It is in all respects the same, whether they are actual or courtesy titles (see pp 62 and 75).

DAUGHTERS AND YOUNGER SONS OF MARQUESSES

The younger sons of a marquess bear the title Lord with their Christian and family names, and all daughters of a marquess bear the title Lady.

Example—Lord Charles Evans
Lady Joan Evans

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

In this category the commonest mistakes are made by those who do not know the proper use of titles. Lord Charles Evans must never be called Lord Evans, no Lady Joan Evans, Lady Evans. When the full titles are not used, they are called Lord Charles and Lady Joan. There is no other abbreviation unless one is on such terms of intimacy as to use their Christian names alone, or, in the case of the men, their surnames alone.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner of address in writing is

My Lord,

I have the honour to remain, my Lord,
Your Lordship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Lord Charles Evans

Madam (or My Lady),

I have the honour to remain, Madam (or my Lady)
Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

The social manner of address in writing is

Dear Lord Charles Evans,

Very faithfully yours,

or more familiarly

Dear Lord Charles,

Yours very truly

or

Dear Lady Joan Evans,

Very faithfully yours,

or more familiarly

Dear Lady Joan,

Very truly yours, or
Very sincerely yours,Address of envelope—

To Lady Joan Evans

WIVES OF YOUNGER SONS OF MARQUESSSES

The mistake already alluded to in this category is made most often of all in the case of wives of younger sons of dukes and marquesses. The wife of Lord Charles Evans is Lady Charles Evans, and never under any circumstances Lady Evans. She is known less formally as Lady Charles. This rule is varied only when she is of higher rank than her husband, in which case her own Christian name is substituted for his (See under MARRIED DAUGHTERS OF MARQUESSSES, p. 60)

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

Madam (or My Lady),

I have the honour to remain, Madam (or my Lady),

Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Lady Charles Evans

The social manner of address in writing is

Dear Lady Charles Evans,

Believe me, dear Lady Charles Evans,

WIDOWS OF YOUNGER SONS OF MARQUESSSES

If the widow of a younger son of a marquess, having no title of her own, remarries with a commoner, she may continue to use her late husband's name and title if she chooses. But if she decides to take her second husband's name, she must relinquish her previous title and become plain Mrs. If, on the other hand, she has a title in her own right, she would use it coupled with her new name.

CHILDREN OF YOUNGER SONS OF MARQUESSSES

The children of younger sons of marquesses have no distinctions of any sort. All the sons and daughters of Lord and Lady Charles Evans would be plain Mr and Miss. They have, of course, some precedence in the social scale.

MARRIED DAUGHTERS OF MARQUESSSES

The daughter of a marquess, in marrying a man of equal or higher rank than her own, shares her husband's title. In all other cases she retains her own title of Lady with her Christian name, even if she marries the younger son of a marquess, because, as stated elsewhere, all peers' daughters rank one degree higher than younger sons of the same grade. In the event of marriage with the heir of an earl or lesser peer, she is entitled, if she prefers it, to retain her own title while her husband is a courtesy lord, because she actually keeps her precedence until he succeeds to his peerage. There are instances of both usages in the peerage, and the chosen style should be ascertained in each case. Marriage with a commoner does not alter her rank in any way (not incidentally that of her husband) Our marquess's daughter, married to Mr Peter Green, would become Lady Joan Green Under no circumstances would she be called Lady Peter Green Together they would be described as Mr Peter and Lady Joan Green Curiously enough, however, the daughter of a marquess (as also of a duke or earl) keeps her rank as such in the table of precedence if she marries out of the peerage, but exchanges it for that of her husband if she remains in it, even if it means descending several steps Thus Lady Joan, having married Mr Peter Green, would go in to dinner before a sister who had married a baron

A commoner	Peter Green Esq	Lady Joan Green
A knight or baronet	Sir Bernard Brown	Lady Joan Brown
A younger son of an earl or lesser peer	The Honourable George Wilson	Lady Joan Wilson
An eldest son of an earl	Viscount Staines	Lady Joan Staines or Viscountess Staines (Lady Staines)
A younger son of a marquess	Lord John Bull	Lady Joan Bull
A younger son of a duke	Lord John Smith	Lady John Smith or Lady Joan Smith
An eldest son of a marquess	The Earl of Malvern (Lord Malvern)	The Countess of Malvern (Lady Malvern)
An eldest son of a duke	The Marquess of Mere (Lord Mere)	The Marchioness of Mere (Lady Mere)

CHILDREN OF DAUGHTERS OF MARQUESESSES

The children of daughters of marquesses receive no titles or distinctions of any sort through their mother

EARLS AND COUNTESSSES

THIS grade is sometimes territorial, sometimes taken from the family name. In the former case the preposition "of" is generally used, and in the latter case it is not, although there are numerous exceptions to both rules.

In one or two instances, such as the Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham, two separate earldoms have become merged. Both titles are used on all formal occasions and even on the social envelope. But in social speech and letters only the first one is employed. The Earl of Winchelsea and Nottingham's title provides an instance of the little traps which are sometimes, almost perversely it would seem, set for the unwary. The name of the ancient town from which Lord Winchelsea takes his title is spelt Winchelsea. Another curious instance is that the town of Beaconsfield, from which Disraeli took his title, is pronounced Beckonsfield. He lived within a few miles of it at Hughenden, and must have been aware of this. But his title was pronounced by him as it is written, and continues to be so pronounced.

Our typical peer in this, the third grade, shall be the Earl of Whitby, with a second title, Viscount Staines, and the family name of Collins.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

It has been remarked already that all peers and peeresses below ducal rank are called lord and lady in speech. This rule applies, of course, to earls and countesses, who are always referred and spoken to as lord and lady. As in the case of the marquessate, there are a few formal occasions on which the full title would be used, but it would never happen in intimate speech

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

My Lord,

I have the honour to remain, my Lord,
Your Lordship's obedient servant,

Madam,

DOWAGER COUNTESSSES

A dowager countess is so called when she is the widow of the preceding earl, although it is more usual in these days to distinguish her from the reigning earl's wife by using her Christian name before her title. Either of the following examples is correct, therefore

The Dowager Countess of Whitby
Muriel, Countess of Whitby

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

is exactly the same as if she were the reigning countess

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

ELDEST SONS OF EARLS

(See also under COURTESY TITLES, p. 41)

As stated elsewhere, peers in this category have lesser titles as well, and the eldest son takes usually the highest of these as his courtesy title which is used in every way as if it were his by right. He takes the title from birth, and on his marriage his wife and children share the honours attached to his rank.

Example—The eldest son of our Earl of Whitby would be the Viscount Staines and his wife the Viscountess Staines. The correct use of these titles will be found under their various headings. It is in all respects the same whether they are actual or courtesy titles (see pp 70 and 71)

DAUGHTERS OF EARLS

Daughters of earls bear the title Lady with their Christian and family names

Example—Lady Violet Collins

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

The same rules apply as in the case of daughters of dukes and marquesses, viz, when the full title is not used, our earl's daughter would be called Lady Violet. There is no other abbreviation unless one is on such terms of intimacy as to use the Christian name alone

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

YOUNGER SONS OF EARLS

Unlike the higher grades of the peerage, younger sons of earls are styled Honourable with their Christian and family names, and there is nothing to distinguish them from the sons of viscounts and barons

Example—The Honourable Thomas Collins

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

As remarked elsewhere, this title is never used in speech or letter writing, excepting on the envelope. The younger sons of earls are called Mr, always in conjunction with the Christian name

Example—Mr Thomas Collins

The title is never printed on visiting-cards, so that without inner knowledge it is difficult to recognize the rank. When it is desired to indicate it, however, a reference to the holder's parentage would be permissible. Servants would announce the younger son of an earl as Mr Thomas Collins

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

Your obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

 dear Collins,

Address of envelope—

To The Honble Thomas Collins

WIVES OF YOUNGER SONS OF EARLS

share their husbands' title

Example —The Honble Mrs Thomas Collins

It should be carefully noted that whereas it is wrong to use the designations Mr or Miss with this title, it is right to use the designation Mrs with it. The title is never used in speech, even by a servant, and the wife of Mr Thomas Collins is always alluded to as Mrs Thomas Collins. If she happens to be of higher rank than her husband, she would use her own title in conjunction with her husband's name—without the Honourable

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

Madam,

I have the honbur to remain, Madam,
 Your obedient servant

Address of envelope—

To The Honble Mrs Thomas Collins

The social manner is

WIDOWS OF YOUNGER SONS OF EARLS

keep their title until re marriage, when it is abandoned in favour of the second husband's status, whether it be higher or lower. This rule does not apply, of course, if the widow possesses a title in her own right.

CHILDREN OF YOUNGER SONS OF EARLS

have no distinctions of any sort. They have, of course, certain social precedence.

MARRIED DAUGHTERS OF EARLS

The daughter of an earl, in marrying a man of equal or higher rank than her own, shares her husband's title. In all other cases she retains her own title of Lady with her Christian name, even if she marries the younger son of an earl, because, as stated elsewhere, all peers' daughters rank one degree higher than younger sons of the same grade. In the event of marriage with the heir of a viscount or lesser peer, she is entitled, if she prefers it, to retain her own title until her husband succeeds to his peerage, because she actually keeps her own precedence until then. In such a case the chosen style should be ascertained. Marriage with a commoner does not alter her rank in any way—not incidentally that of her husband. Our earl's daughter, married to Mr Peter Green, would become Lady Violet Green. She must never be called Lady Peter Green. Together they would be described as Mr Peter and Lady Violet Green. Curiously enough, however, the daughter of an earl keeps her rank as such in the table of precedence if she marries out of the peerage, but exchanges it for that of her husband if she remains in it, even if it means descending several steps. Thus Lady Violet, having married Mr Peter Green would go in to dinner before a sister who had married a baron

Examples — Marriage with

A commoner	Mr Peter Green	Lady Violet Green
A knight or baronet	Sir Bernard Brown	Lady Violet Brown
A younger son of an earl or lesser peer	The Honourable Michael O Mara	Lady Violet O Mara
An eldest son of an earl	Viscount Staines (Lord Staines)	Viscountess Staines (Lady Staines)
A younger son of a marquess	Lord John Bull	Lady John Bull
A younger son of a duke	Lord John Smith	Lady John Smith

CHILDREN OF DAUGHTERS OF EARLS

The children of daughters of earls receive no titles or distinctions of any sort through their mother

VISCOUNTS AND VISCOUNTESSSES

THIS title is sometimes territorial, sometimes derived from the family name, but in neither case is the preposition "of" used between the style and the title, e g Viscount Hereford, not The Viscount of Hereford. It is becoming increasingly usual, however, in this degree to make a territorial addition to the title, e g Viscount Grey of Fallodon, and Viscount Haldane of Cloan. In such cases the full style is used on formal occasions and in addressing all letters, formal and social.

Our example in this, the fourth grade of the peerage, shall be Viscount O'Mara, with the same family name.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

The rule already explained, that all peers and peeresses below ducal rank are called lord and lady in speech, applies equally, of course, to viscounts and their wives. As in other ranks, there are a few formal occasions on which the full title would be used, but it would never happen in intimate speech.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

My Lord,

I have the honour to remain, my Lord,
Your Lordship's obedient servant,

DOWAGER VISCOUNTESSES

A dowager viscountess is the widow of the preceding peer (see p 40). There are two accepted forms of address, thus

Anne, Viscountess O'Mara

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

is exactly the same as if she were the reigning viscountess (see above)

ELDEST SONS OF VISCOUNTS

Courtesy titles cease at the grade of an earl, so that the eldest son of a viscount does not take his father's second title, even if he happens to have one. Like his younger brothers, he is merely The Honourable, and his wife shares the title.

Example —The Honble. Michael O'Mara
The Honble Mrs O Mara

Their visiting-cards would be inscribed "Mr O Mara" and "Mrs O'Mara" without the Christian name.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

As explained before, the title Honourable is never used in speech, so that the eldest son of our viscount would be spoken and referred to as Mr O'Mara and his wife as Mrs O'Mara. This rule is followed by servants also.

BARONS AND BARONESSSES

THIS title is sometimes territorial, sometimes taken from the family name, and sometimes from other sources entirely, as, for example, Lord Vaux of Harrowden, whose family name is Mostyn

The peculiar point about this title is that, unlike its foreign equivalent, it is not used in this country excepting by peeresses in their own right

Our example in this, the fifth and last grade of the peerage, shall be Baron Westley, with the family name of Whitworth

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

The rule of addressing all peers below ducal rank as lord and lady is equally applicable here Baronesses in their own right, however, are sometimes called by this title

BARONETS

THIS title, identified by the prefix Sir to Christian and surname, is an hereditary honour descending from father to son. Failing a son to the first holder, the title becomes extinct; but failing a son to a later holder, the title goes to the nearest male descendant of a former holder. It is distinguished from that of knight by the word baronet, or one of its contractions, being added at the end of the name, thus:

Sir George Robinson, Bt.

The word baronet is used in full only in formal documents. Bt. is the older abbreviation and the only one recognized by the Council of the Baronetage, but in spite of this, Bart. is still much used. This is a pity, because it is considered wrong by those who know and prefer the right way.

A baronet's wife takes the title of Lady in conjunction with the surname only—never with her own or her husband's Christian name unless she happens to have a title of her own (see pp. 45, 53, 61, 69, 74 and 80).

Example —Lady Robinson.

The only exception to this rule might be the written one of Lady (George) Robinson, when it is necessary to distinguish her from another Lady Robinson. In actual speech there can be no such distinction. The formal, documentary title of a baronet's wife is Dame before Christian and surnames, thus:

Dame Mary Robinson.

This style is beginning to be more general, but it should not be used unless it is known to be preferred

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

A baronet is addressed by his title and Christian name, as, for instance, Sir George, and spoken of as Sir George Robinson, or, more familiarly, as Sir George. There is no distinction here between a baronet and a knight

Yours very sincerely,

Address of envelope—

To The Dowager Lady Robinson, or
To Dora, Lady Robinson.

This style is beginning to be more general, but it should not be used unless it is known to be preferred

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

A baronet is addressed by his title and Christian name, as, for instance, Sir George, and spoken of as Sir George Robinson, or, more familiarly, as Sir George. There is no distinction here between a baronet and a knight.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

Sir,

I have the honour to remain, Sir,
Your obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Sir George Robinson, Bt

Madam,

I have the honour to remain Madam,
Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To Lady Robinson.

The social manner is

Dear Sir George Robinson,

Believe me, dear Sir George Robinson,
Faithfully yours,

or more familiarly

Dear Sir George, or

Dear Robinson,

Believe me, dear Sir George (or dear Robinson),
Yours sincerely,

Address of envelope—

To Sir George Robinson, Bt

Dear Lady Robinson,

Believe me, dear Lady Robinson,
Yours very sincerely,

Address of envelope—

To Lady Robinson

WIDOWS OF BARONETS

retain their style of address unless and until the succeeding baronet marries, when the widow is called either

The Dowager Lady Robinson, or
Dora, Lady Robinson

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

is the same as for a baronet's wife (see p 81)

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN WRITING

The formal manner is

Madam,

I have the honour to remain, Madam,
Your Ladyship's obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To The Dowager Lady Robinson, or
To Dora, Lady Robinson

The social manner is

Dear Lady Robinson,

Believe me, dear Lady Robinson,
Yours very sincerely,

Address of envelope—

To Dora, Lady Robinson.

WIDOWS OF BARONETS RE-MARRYING

If marrying a peer, an honourable, or another baronet, the title and name of the new husband is taken If marrying a commoner they have the right to retain their title But in this case Lady Robinson, marrying Mr Brown, remains Lady Robinson

CHILDREN OF BARONETS

have no titles or distinctions, excepting that the eldest son's Christian name is not used in speech by or to servants and inferiors

Example —Mr Robinson.

HONOURABLES

When the son of a viscount or baron, or the younger son of an earl, receives a baronetcy, the foregoing rules apply, excepting as to the address of envelopes, which should be

To The Honble Sir George Robinson, Bt.
To The Honble Lady Robinson.

NEWLY CREATED TITLES

The recipient has no right to use his new title until the legalities connected with it are completed and the ceremony performed.

KNIGHTS

THE orders of knighthood are various, but not one of them is hereditary We will take them in the order of their precedence and deal with general rules as they arise.

THE MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER

With very rare exceptions, this order is conferred only upon royalties and the peerage It is distinguished by the letters K.G after the name and title:

Example.—The Duke of Middlesex, K G

THE MOST ANCIENT AND MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE THISTLE

This order is conferred exclusively upon Scottish nobles, and is distinguished by the letters K T after name and title.

Example —The Earl of Queensferry, K.T

THE MOST ILLUSTRIOUS ORDER OF ST. PATRICK

This order is conferred exclusively upon Irish nobles, and is distinguished by the letters K.P after name and title

Example —The Viscount O'Mara, K.P.

THE MOST HONOURABLE ORDER OF THE BATH

This is the first of the orders of knighthood which are conferred on commoners and in which there is more than one class. Members of the first two classes only are knights, and the use of the title in speech and writing is the same as for baronets and their wives and children (excepting, of course, the abbreviation Bt.), though some rights of baronets' wives are allowed to the wives of knights only by courtesy (see pp 81 to 84)

The classes and distinctions are as follows

Knights Grand Cross	Sir Robert Johnson, G.C.B.
Knights Commanders	Sir Edward Thompson, K.C.B.
Companions	Richard Jackson, Esq., C.B.

The wives of companions, as such, have no distinctions, though they have recognized precedence.

THE MOST EXALTED ORDER OF THE STAR OF INDIA

*As in the previous case, this order has three classes. Members of the first two classes only are knights, and the use of the title in speech and writing is the same as for baronets and their wives and children (excepting, of course, the abbreviation Bt.), though some rights of baronets' wives are allowed to knights' wives only by courtesy (see pp 81 to 84)*

Knights Grand
Commanders	Sir Robert Johnson, G.C.S.I.
Knights Commanders	Sir Edward Thompson, K.C.S.I.
Companions	Richard Jackson, Esq., C.S.I.

The wives of companions, as such, have no distinctions, though they have recognized precedence.

THE MOST DISTINGUISHED ORDER OF ST. MICHAEL AND ST. GEORGE

This order also has three classes:

Knights Grand Cross	.	Sir Robert Johnson, G.C.M.G.
Knights Commanders	.	Sir Edward Thompson, K.C.M.G.
Companions	.	Richard Jackson, Esq, C.M.G.

Members of the first two classes only are knights, and the use of the title in speech and writing is the same as for baronets and their wives and children (excepting, of course, the abbreviation Bt.), though some rights of baronets' wives are allowed to knights' wives only by courtesy (see pp. 81 to 84). The wives of companions, as such, have no distinctions, though they have recognized precedence.

THE MOST EMINENT ORDER OF THE INDIAN EMPIRE

There are three classes in this order, members of the first two classes only being knights. The use of the title in speech and writing is the same as for baronets and their wives and children (excepting, of course, the abbreviation Bt.), though some rights of baronets' wives are allowed to knights' wives only by courtesy (see pp. 81 to 84). The wives of companions, as such, have no distinctions, though they have recognized precedence.

Commanders Sir Robert Johnson, G C I E

Knights Commanders . Sir Edward Thompson, K.C I E.

Companions . Richard Jackson, Esq, C I E.

THE ROYAL VICTORIAN ORDER

There are five classes in this order, for which women as well as men are eligible:

KNIGHTS BACHELOR

This is the lowest order of knighthood, and is designated thus—

Sir William Jones.

In formal documents only the word Knight or the abbreviation Knt. is sometimes added to the name. In all other respects the use of the title in speech and writing (excepting, of course, the abbreviation Bt.) is the same as for baronets and their wives and children (see pp 81 to 84).

WIDOWS OF KNIGHTS

WIDOWS OF KNIGHTS RE-MARRYING

See under BARONETS (pp 81 and 84)

HONORARY ORDERS OF KNIGHTHOOD

These are conferred from time to time on foreigners. Excepting in rare cases granted specially by the King the recipient has no right to the title of Sir and it should not be used before the name.

NEWLY CREATED TITLES

The recipient has no right to use his newly created title until the legalities connected with it are completed and the ceremony performed of a lesser order as well, would have the highest order only designated, but it should on no account be omitted. Members of more than one of the lower orders of knighthood would have the abbreviations of two, but not more, after their names. The two highest would naturally be chosen, a knighthood of a lower order coming before a companionship of a higher.

Example — Sir William Browning, K C M G , C B

If there were more than two, the remaining honours would be inferred by an "etc."

In the case of a Knight Bachelor being also a companion in another order, his designation would be

Sir Henry Jones, C B

In this case the letters K C B would be wrong, because, although a knight and a member of the Order of the Bath, he is not a knight in that particular order.

When a member of an order of knighthood is promoted to a higher rank within the same order, the lower rank is absorbed in the higher and therefore the designation of the lower rank is omitted after the name. Thus when Richard Jackson, Esq , C V O is created a knight of the Royal Victorian Order he becomes Sir Richard Jackson, K C V O.

When the son of a viscount or baron or the younger son of an earl receives a knighthood, the foregoing rules apply, excepting as to the address of envelopes, which should be

To The Honble Sir William Browning K.C.M.G
(or otherwise)

To The Honble Lady Browning

Dames Grand Cross	Dame Matilda Johnson, G B E
Dames Commanders	Dame Pamela Thompson, D B E
Commanders	Mrs Jackson, C B E
Officers	Mrs Black, O B E
Members	Miss Brown, M B E

Husbands of ladies raised to any one of the ranks in this order do not share their wives' distinctions

The title carried by the first two degrees of this order is used always in conjunction with the lady's Christian name. The formal mode of address in speech is "Dame Matilda" or "Dame Pamela". The formal mode of address in writing is

Dear Madam,

I beg to remain, dear Madam,
Your obedient servant

Or less formally

Dear Dame Matilda Johnson,

Believe me to be,

Address of envelope—

To Dame Matilda Johnson, G B E (or D B E)

CHIEFS OF HIGHLAND CLANS

By ancient custom to which they rightly cling Chiefs of Highland Clans are known by their territorial names. Mr is not used. Mackivular of Mackivular is called Mackivular (not The Mackivular). MacHector of Drimmore is called Drimmore.

The formal mode of address in writing is:

Sir (or Dear Sir),

The social mode of address is:

Dear Mackivular, or
Dear Drimmore,

The address of envelope in all cases is:

To John Mackivular of Mackivular, Esq, or
To James MacHector of Drimmore, Esq ;

Their wives are addressed formally in writing as:

Madam (or Dear Madam),

and socially as:

Dear Mrs Mackivular of Mackivular, or
Dear Mrs MacHector of Drimmore,

They are introduced or announced as:

Mrs Mackivular of Mackivular, or
Mrs MacHector of Drimmore.

Their heirs are addressed in writing as

John Mackivular, Younger of Mackivular, or
James MacHector, Younger of Drummore,

and they are also introduced or announced in this way

All unmarried daughters use the title, thus

Miss MacHector of Drummore

for the eldest, and

Miss Jean MacHector of Drummore

for a younger one

It is not the custom for younger sons to use the title

IRISH CHIEFTAINS

By ancient custom and usage the head of certain Irish families is designated by the word "The." For example

The O'Donoghue of the Glens, The O'Moore, The Fox.

This title is complete without Mr or Esq. The Chieftain's wife is known as Madam O'Donoghue, Madam O'Moore or Madam Fox.

The formal mode of address in writing is

Sir (or Dear Sir),

The social mode of address is

Dear O'Donoghue, or
Dear O'Moore,

The address of the envelope is

The O'Donoghue of the Glens, or
The O'Moore,

The chieftains' wives are addressed formally in writing as

Madam (or Dear Madam),

and socially as

Madam O'Donoghue, or
Madam O'Moore,

and they are introduced in this way

The sons and daughters are addressed as the children of an Esquire.

ESQUIRES

THE almost universal use of this title for every man who cannot claim a higher one persists in spite of protests and objections from those who are really entitled to it. The rule has established itself that it is positively rude to address an envelope to anyone above the rank of working man as Mr. This being so, the following are the correct uses for the head of the family. The formal manner of address in speech is Sir, and the social manner Mr Robins. His wife is called Madam, and Mrs Robins. The formal manner of address in writing is

Sir,

I beg to remain, Sir,

Your obedient servant,

Madam,

I beg to remain, Madam,

Your obedient servant,

The social manner in writing is—

Dear Mr Robins,

I am,

Yours sincerely,

Dear Mrs Robins,

Believe me, dear Mrs Robins,

Yours very sincerely,

Address of envelopes—

To Harold Robins, Esq.,

To Mrs Robins,

For all other male members of the family the rules are the same, but envelopes to their wives include their husband's Christian names, for instance.

Mrs John Robins

Wives of commoners take precedence in the family from their husbands, as in the titled classes. Thus the wife of Harold Robins becomes Mrs Mary Robins in widowhood while her eldest son's wife is Mrs Robins when her husband in his turn becomes head of the family. If the eldest son of a widow is a bachelor his mother retains her status until he marries. If he dies unmarried the second son and his wife attain the headship. But if his mother predeceases him there is no Mrs Robins unless he marries or until he dies.

SONS

bearing the same name as their fathers are addressed thus:

To Harold Robins, Jr., Esq.

There was a Victorian habit of addressing young men of nursery and school age as Master Robins, which seems happily to have died out. Now the more sensible manner of addressing all boys up to school-leaving age is simply Harold Robins, after which they may be considered grown-up and worthy of the title Esq.

DAUGHTERS

The eldest unmarried daughter of the head of the family is Miss Robins. All other unmarried women in the family use their distinguishing Christian names, for example:

Miss Jane Robins.

A final word seems necessary regarding the right and wrong uses of the title Esquire. One hopes it is needless to say that it should never be used in conjunction with any other title, as for instance the prefix Mr. Apparently too, some doubt arises occasionally as to the lesser grades of orders of knighthood Commanders, Companions, Officers and Members of the various orders of knighthood are addressed as esquires with the distinguishing abbreviation after the name, thus

Richard Jackson, Esq, C.V O

For fuller details see under Knights (p 86 et seq)

DOUBLE NAMES

THE only justification for a hyphenated double name is when two land-owning families have been merged into one through marriage, or when legal licence to adopt it has been obtained. The form need not be denied, however, to those who use it for convenience, though in such cases a hyphen should not be used. In speech as well as writing the two names are always used.

MAIDS OF HONOUR

Addressed in formal speech and writing as Madam

Envelopes are addressed—

To The Honble Miss Gibbs,

and otherwise as a Baron's daughter (see pp 74 and 80)

PRESIDENTS OF SOCIETIES

are addressed in formal speech and writing as Sir or Mr President. In the case of a titled holder of the office he would be addressed according to his rank, e.g. My Lord Duke (or Your Grace) and President, or My Lord and President, etc. Where a woman holds office she is addressed as Madam unless she has a title, in which case the rule is Your Grace and President (if a duchess) My Lady and President (if a lesser peeress or wife of a baronet or knight). In all cases envelopes are addressed according to name and rank, with the addition of

President of The —————

PRIVY COUNCILLORS

THIS office is conferred for life, but it is not hereditary. All members of the Cabinet must be privy councillors, but all privy councillors are not members of the Cabinet.

There is nothing to indicate this rank in the style of addressing in speech, which is according to the holder's rank otherwise, but in writing the name is preceded with the distinction 'The Right Honble'. Wives do not share this title. In the case of the peerage the rank of privy councillor is only indicated by the letters P C after the name, as in the three lowest grades the title is already used and in the two highest grades it is assumed to be incorporated in the loftier titles.

Examples are as follows. A commoner is referred and spoken to as Mr Williams, while the manner of address in writing is, formally,

Sir (or Dear Sir),

I have the honour to be, Sir (or Dear Sir),
Yours faithfully,

or socially

Dear Mr Williams,

Believe me,
Yours sincerely,

Address of envelope in both cases—

To The Right Honble James Williams

His wife does not share the title, and would therefore always be addressed in speech and writing as Mrs Williams.

In the case of Navy, Army or Air Force officers the style of address in writing is, for example,

To Admiral The Right Honble. Sir James Smith

or

To Colonel The Right Honble. Henry Jones

or

To Air Vice-Marshal The Right Honble. Sir Josiah Blank.

In the case of Church dignitaries the style of address in writing would be, for example,

To The Right Rev. The Right Honble. The Lord Bishop of Blank.

THE CHURCHES

THE CHURCH OF ENGLAND

SPIRITUAL PEERS

They are the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Bishops of London, Durham, and Winchester, and twenty-one of the other English Diocesan Bishops in order of seniority. These twenty six dignitaries of the Church have seats in the House of Lords.

ARCHBISHOPS

The Archbishop of Canterbury ranks next in precedence to the Royal Family, and above dukes in the Roll of Peerage. The Archbishop of York ranks next to the Lord Chancellor.

STYLE OF ADDRESSING IN SPEECH

In contrast to the social rule for dukes, the invariable manner of addressing the Archbishops of Canterbury and York in speech both by equals and inferiors is "Your Grace." They are referred to by their territorial titles, e.g. "The Archbishop of Canterbury," and not by name, but where no confusion is likely, "the Archbishop" is sufficient. Only in cases of past or retired prelates are they referred to by name, e.g. Archbishop Tait.

and in all other respects as the English Primate

SIGNATURES

A reigning archbishop uses his Christian name in English or Latin, or the initials of his Christian names, coupled with the Latin name of his see, or some abbreviation of it

For instance, the Archbishop of Canterbury signs himself Cosmo Cantuar

WIVES OF ARCHBISHOPS

The wife of an archbishop does not share her husband's title unless, of course, he possesses a temporal as well as the spiritual one, in which case rules previously given would apply Otherwise she is plain Mrs

CHILDREN OF ARCHBISHOPS

have no titles or distinctions of any sort

RETIRED ARCHBISHOPS

By resigning an archbishop legally goes back to the status of bishop, though by courtesy he is still addressed as archbishop

The retirement of the late Lord Davidson of Lambeth from the Archbishopric of Canterbury created a precedent in regard to that particular see But for the fact that a temporal title was bestowed upon the retiring Primate he would also have renounced his seat in the House of Lords The formal manner of address in his case was

My Lord, or

Most Reverend Sir,

I have the honour to remain, my Lord (or Most Reverend Sir),

To The Most Reverend The Lord Davidson of Lambeth

In all other cases the formal manner of address is

Most Reverend Sir,

I have the honour to remain Most Reverend Sir,

Your devoted and obedient servant,

Address of envelope—

To The Most Rev Archbishop Brown

They are addressed and referred to in speech, both socially and formally, by title and surname.

*Example—*Archbishop Brown

They use their ordinary signatures, with the addition of Archbishop or Bishop

BISHOPS

The twenty four bishops who, with the two archbishops, have seats in the House of Lords, rank below viscounts and above barons. The manner of address in speech is My Lord and His Lordship, both formally and socially

The formal manner of address in writing is

SUFFRAGAN BISHOPS

The same as English Bishops (see above), excepting as to—

Address of envelope—

To The Right Rev. The Lord Bishop Suffragan of —.

IRISH BISHOPS

The manner of address in speech and writing is the same as for English bishops (see p. 104).

The exception is the Bishop of Meath, who is addressed as "The Most Rev." instead of "The Right Rev."

SCOTTISH BISHOPS

The same as for Irish Bishops (see above). The Primus is generally addressed as:

The Most Rev. The Primus.

RETIRED BISHOPS

The same as English Bishops (see p. 104), excepting that they are addressed by personal name.

Example.—Bishop Brown, and envelopes should be addressed—

To The Right Rev. Bishop Brown.

WIVES AND CHILDREN OF BISHOPS (Rules as for ARCH-BISHOPS, p. 103).

DEANS

are addressed in speech as Mr Dean. The formal manner of address in writing is:

Very Rév. Sir,

I have the honour to remain, Very Rev. Sir,
Your obedient servant,

The social manner of address in writing is:

Dear Mr Dean, or

Dear Dean ———,

Believe me, dear Mr Dean (or dear Dean ———),
Yours very truly,

Address of envelope in both cases—

To The Very Rev. The Dean of ———.

RETIRED DEANS

have no right to the title on retirement, but if they prefer to use it they are addressed as acting deans, except that the envelope would be addressed in the personal name, thus

To The Very Rev Dean Cox, D D

PROVOSTS

are the incumbents of those parish churches which have become cathedrals in recent times. They take rank and precedence of deans and are addressed in speech as Mr Provost. The formal manner of address in writing is

Very Rev Sir,

I have the honour to remain, Very Rev Sir,
Your obedient servant,

The social manner of address in writing is
Dear Mr Provost, or

The social manner is

Dear Prebendary, ———,

I am, dear Prebendary ———,
Yours very truly,

Address of envelope in both cases—

To The Rev Prebendary ———

OTHER CLERGY

There is no difference in style of addressing the remaining ranks, although beneficed clergy are usually called in speech either The Vicar or The Rector (the difference is a matter of tithes in the parish) But it is definitely wrong to speak or refer to a clergyman as the Rev Smith or the Rev Mr Smith

The formal manner of address in writing is

Reverend Sir, or
Sir,

I beg to remain, Reverend Sir (or Sir),
Your obedient servant,

The social manner is

Dear Mr Smith,

I am, dear Mr Smith,
Yours very truly (or sincerely).

Address of envelope in both cases—

To The Rev Thomas Smith.

TITLED CLERGY

A temporal title is always preceded in writing by the spiritual one

*Examples—*The Rev Lord John Smith.

The Rev The Honble David Jones

The Rev Sir John Bull, Bt

No ordained priest of the Church can receive the accolade of knighthood, but in some cases the insignia of an order of knighthood is conferred which carries the designation (i e K C V O) without the title.

CHANCELLORS

are the judges of the Episcopal Courts and the principal lay officers of the respective dioceses. They are usually, but not invariably, barristers. The title is used only in connection with their official duties. By the clergy and others within the diocese they should be called in speech Mr Chancellor, or more familiarly Chancellor. When sitting in court, Sir, Worshipful Sir (not Your Worship) and The Learned Chancellor are correct. In writing, Sir, Dear Sir, or, less formally, Dear Mr Chancellor, should be used.

The envelope should be addressed—

To The Worshipful Chancellor Smith, or

To The Worshipful Thomas Smith, or

To The Worshipful Sir Thomas Smith (if a knight)

If the chancellor is a K C the abbreviation should be added after the name.

THE ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH

It should be clearly understood that the following rules have no legal foundation in this country. Roman Catholic archbishops and bishops have no claim to territorial titles or to the use of the salutations Your Grace or My Lord, and such modes of address are not permitted in official documents and circles. But unofficially and within the Roman Catholic community this chapter holds good.

THE POPE

THE UNIVERSITIES

It is difficult to find authentic information about the correct ways in which to address university officials, but the following seem to be accepted by custom

CHANCELLORS

In speech they are addressed formally as Sir or (in the case of a peer) My Lord or Your Grace as the case may be More familiarly as Mr Chancellor

In writing the formal mode of address is

Sir (or according to peerage rank),

I am, Sir (My Lord),
Your obedient servant,

The social manner is

Dear Mr Chancellor, or more intimately
My dear Chancellor,

I am, dear Mr Chancellor (my dear Chancellor),
Yours sincerely,

Address of envelope in both cases—

To The Rt Honble The Earl of Blank,
Chancellor of the University of _____

VICE CHANCELLORS

The rules as for CHANCELLORS apply (Dear Mr Vice Chancellor, etc.) excepting that the envelope is addressed thus

To The Right Worshipful The Vice-Chancellor of The University of _____

HIGH STEWARDS

are addressed in speech according to their rank. In writing the formal mode is

Sir (or according to peerage rank)

I am Sir (My Lord)

Your obedient servant

The social manner is

My dear High Steward

I am, my dear High Steward

Yours sincerely,

Address of envelope in both cases—

To His Grace The Duke of Blank,

High Steward of The University of ———

DEPUTY HIGH STEWARDS

As High Stewards

DIRECTORS

MASTERS

MISTRESSES

PRESIDENTS

PRINCIPALS

PROVOSTS

RECTORS

WARDENS

In speech they are addressed formally as Sir or Madam.
Socially by name

In writing they are addressed formally as

Sir (or Madam)

Your obedient servant,

Socially the address is

Dear Master of ——— College.

Dear Mistress of ——— College.

Dear President of ——— College, etc.

Address of envelope in both cases—

To The Master of ——— College, etc.

DEÁNS

of colleges are addressed according to their own name and rank. In the rare cases (cathedral colleges) where a dean is head he is a dean of the Church of England and must be addressed as such (see p. 105).

PROFESSORS

The title is used in speech and writing, formally and socially.

Formally:

Dear Sir,

I am, dear Sir,

Your obedient servant,

Socially:

Dear Professor Dash,

Believe me,

Yours sincerely,

Address of envelope in both cases—

To Professor Dash.

DEGREES

The custom established and used by the older universities is really the best to follow. The rule is that doctors in any faculty use the designation, while lower degrees (e.g. M.A., LL.B., B.Sc., etc.) are omitted.

DOCTORS

Degrees are given by the older and most of the newer universities in seven faculties Divinity, Law, Literature, Medicine, Music, Philosophy and Science The following are the various styles and abbreviations

DOCTOR OF DIVINITY D D

DOCTOR OF LAWS LL D

Conferred by Cambridge and all other universities granting degrees in this faculty

DOCTOR OF CIVIL LAW D C.L.

This is the Oxford and Durham degree corresponding to the Cambridge LL D

DOCTOR OF LITERATURE Litt.D (Cambridge and Dublin)
D Litt (Oxford and some others)
D.Lit (London and Manchester)

DOCTOR OF MEDICINE M D (all universities except Oxford)

D M (Oxford University)

DOCTOR OF MUSIC Mus D (Cambridge)

D Mus (Oxford)

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY Ph D (Cambridge and others)

D Phil (Oxford)

DOCTOR OF SCIENCE Sc D (Cambridge and Dublin)

D Sc (Oxford and others)

DOCTORS OF MEDICINE

The title has become so wedded to the medical profession that the reminder is needed that not all qualified medical men hold the final degree Those who do are addressed and referred to in speech as Dr Gray, and letters are addressed

To Thomas Gray, Esq M D

If a knighthood or baronetcy has been conferred, the address in speech becomes Sir Thomas Gray or Sir Thomas, and the envelope would be inscribed

To Sir Thomas Gray, M D , or
To Sir Thomas Gray, Bt , M D

If a peerage has been conferred the address in speech and writing is according to rank (see under appropriate headings) with perhaps the degree of medicine added after the more important honours

Those medical men who have not taken the final degree are addressed in every way as if they have, excepting that their actual qualifications, such as M B , L R C P , would be substituted for M D on the envelope

There is also the firmly established custom in the medical profession of addressing surgeons both in speech and writing as Mr, and inscribing the envelope thus

T Gray, Esq , F R C S

although an exception to this rule is in the case of gynaecologists who, though surgeons, are addressed in every way as doctors

DOCTORS OF DIVINITY

are usually but not always clergymen The degree can be taken by, or conferred on, laymen as well In the case of the clergy, they are addressed and referred to in speech as Dr Read Formal letters would begin Reverend Sir; social ones, Dear Dr Read, and the envelope in each case would be addressed

To The Rev James Read, D D

Doctorates in all other faculties are governed by the same rules, although the use of the title is not so universal, and is largely a matter of personal preference

HONORARY DOCTORATES

The same rules for use apply as to other holders

LESSER DEGREES

Letters denoting masters' and bachelors' degrees, which are, of course, most common, are not used even in university circles in ordinary correspondence, and socially they are not used at all. There are certain formal occasions on which members of learned professions would use them, such as in lists of lectures, etc., but a master's or bachelor's degree would not be appended to a doctor's. The reason for this is that in the older universities a doctor's degree is considered to include an M A—it cannot, in fact, be taken without it.
